NEXUS ENGINEERING GROUP ADDS PROJECT SERVICES DIRECTOR FOCUSED ON ENHANCING CAPABILITIES

Nexus hires John Ririe to oversee project services functions at the company.

Cleveland, OH - Nexus Engineering Group LLC announces the hiring of John Ririe as project services director for the company. Ririe will be responsible for expanding and enhancing project services capabilities and their integration with Nexus' Advance Work Packaging process.

Project Services has a direct impact on both external and internal Nexus processes, practices, and performance. Ririe, with the support of company discipline and project managers, will build on a strong foundation of project services. Enhancements to this important service offering and function will take advantage of the latest proven technology and management practices.

Project Services, scaled to plant level projects, is a unique offering from Nexus. Continued investment in this area and integration with available tools and technology are geared toward improved returns and predictable performance by our clients executing small and mid-sized projects.

"We embrace continuous improvement in our drive to meet our customers' business requirements. We are always looking for ways to help our clients make better project investments." said Jeffrey Herzog, President of Nexus Engineering Group, LLC. "This focus keeps our services competitive and supports our profitability goals allowing us to reinvest in our company's team and strategic assets."

Ririe will work directly with all company personnel, clients, suppliers, vendors, and construction contractors in leading the evolution of project services at Nexus.

"I am excited to be a part of the Nexus team and look forward to helping the company continue to grow," said John Ririe. "We truly think differently at Nexus and it shows by where we invest our energy and efforts."

Ririe, a Project Management Professional and Certified Cost Professional, holds a Master of Engineering in Construction Engineering, a Master of Business Administration, and a Bachelor of Science in Management. He's held various roles in project services capacities for the last decade and has made significant impacts to several company processes affecting project outcomes.
